America 's Development
Foundation (ADF) is a U.S. nonprofit private voluntary organization
(PVO) established in 1980. ADF is dedicated to the international development of democracy. ADF's overall approach is based on the belief that a strong civil society, comprising a diversity of autonomous economic, political, social and cultural institutions, provides the
indispensable foundation of a sustainable democracy. ADF has a successful record helping thousands of civil society organizations (CSOs)
strengthen democratic values, institutions and processes in their countries and develop their communities. ADF
program areas include advocacy, civic education, civil society

building and institutional development, community mobilization and development, electoral processes, human rights, legal assistance and the rule of law, local democratic governance, and refugee return and reintegration. ADF has experience working in over thirty countries in Eastern and Central Europe, the Middle East, the Caribbean, Central America, and Africa.

The project will contribute to the restoration, protection and management of globally significant mountain forest and alpine meadow ecosystems, including a number of endemic and endangered species and transboundary migrants. The project will also introduce active management of pastures, and support the development of a participatory approach to natural resource management overall. Equally importantly, the project will contribute to lasting poverty alleviation in some of the poorest areas of Azerbaijan, by introducing and catalyzing the adoption of more modern, sustainable, and value-added approaches to natural resource use and agricultural production and diversification of economic activities, including development of rural/eco-tourism.

The Caucasus Research
Resource Centers (CRRC) is a program of the Eurasia Foundation funded by the Carnegie Corporation of New York.
The program aims to increase the accessibility of high-quality research resources, to strengthen capacity and to increase the dialogue and collaboration between social science
researchers and policy practitioners. Direct and indirect beneficiaries
include social science researchers, faculty from academic institutions, policy practitioners, and other professionals from non-governmental,
private and public sectors. Primary Activities (1) Social Science and Public Policy Training: CRRC
organizes training
courses, seminars,
workshops and lectures
on a variety of social science and public policy topics with particular emphasis on methodological

component, attracting both local and foreign experts as speakers or trainers, locally and regionally. (2) Fellowship Program: CRRC supports, both organizationally and financially, outstanding local scholars interested in pursuing original policy-oriented research. (3) CRRC Data Initiative – a comprehensive annual regional survey on household economic behavior and social attitudes conducted simultaneously in Armenia, Azerbaijan, and Georgia. The data is available for use by local and foreign social science and policy research communities interested in the South Caucasus. Access to Resources CRRC Library provides open access to the collection of Azerbaijani, English and Russian language printed materials in social sciences—textbooks, references materials, periodical publications etc. The CRRC IT lab provides free access to major on-line journals in social sciences, on-line databases, and international data sources. The IT labs are free of charge and open to researchers,

practitioners, and
students for research purposes.

EngenderHealth works worldwide to improve the lives of individuals by making reproductive health services safe, available, and sustainable. We provide technical assistance, training, and information, with a focus on practical solutions that improve services where resources are scarce. We believe that individuals have the right to make informed decisions about their reproductive health and to receive care that meets their needs. We work in partnership with governments, institutions, and health care professionals to make this right a reality.

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and make it universally accessible and useful. As a first step to fulfilling that mission, Google's founders Larry Page and Sergey Brin developed a new approach to online search that took root in a Stanford University dorm room and quickly spread to information seekers around the globe. Google is now widely recognized as the world's largest search engine -- an easy-to-use free service that usually returns relevant results in a fraction of a second. When you visit www.google.com or one of the dozens of other Google domains, you'll be able to find information in many different languages; check stock quotes, maps, and news headlines; lookup phonebook listings for every city in the United States; search billions of images and peruse the world's largest archive of Usenet messages -- more than 1 billion posts dating back to 1981. We also provide ways to access all this information without making a special trip to the Google homepage. The Google Toolbar enables you to conduct a Google search from anywhere on the web. And for those times when you're away from your PC altogether, Google can be used from a number of wireless platforms including WAP and i-mode phones. Google's utility and ease of use have made it one of the world's best known brands almost entirely through word of mouth from satisfied users. As a business, Google generates revenue by providing advertisers with the opportunity to deliver measurable, cost-effective online advertising that is relevant to the information displayed on any given page. This makes the advertising useful to you as well as to the advertiser placing it. We believe you should know when someone has paid to put a message in front of you, so we always distinguish ads from the search results or other content on a page. We don't sell placement in the search results themselves, or allow people to pay for a higher ranking there. Thousands of advertisers use our Google AdWords program to promote their products and services on the web with targeted advertising, and we believe AdWords is the largest program of its kind. In addition, thousands of web site managers take advantage of our Google AdSense program to deliver ads relevant to the content on their sites, improving their ability to generate revenue and enhancing the experience for their users. To learn more about Google, click on the link at the left for the area that most interests you. Or type what you want to find into our search box and hit enter. Once you do, you'll be on your way to understanding why others say, "Google is the closest thing the Web has to an ultimate answer machine." What's a Google? "Googol" is the mathematical term for a 1 followed by 100 zeros. The term was coined by Milton Sirota, nephew of American mathematician Edward Kasner, and was popularized in the book, "Mathematics and the Imagination" by Kasner and James Newman. Google's play on the term reflects the company's mission to organize the immense amount of information available on the web.

governmental research organization dedicated to the examination of the economic, social and geopolitical issues of the Caspian Sea Region. Its special focus is on analyzing a wide-range of issues related to the development of the oil and energy resources in the region and its impact on the economic, political and social fabric of the whole Caspian area. The role of the ICCS is to inform and educate the public and all interested parties in the region and worldwide and create an environment of understanding, discussion and open dialogue that will lead to positive change for all the people of the region. The ICCS believes that the Caspian Sea region, straddling both Europe and Asia does and will play an important role in helping bridge the economics of Europe and Central Asia, especially in the energy sector. Stability and regional cooperation in the area are the key factors that will help Caspian region fulfill this potential. ICCS, therefore, seeks to actively encourage and support any and all policies and strategies that will lead to stability and economic prosperity of the area. The ICCS seeks to create an environment, where stability in the region can be achieved by conflict resolution mechanisms and positive dialogue. The ICCS in its mandate will implement its mission through research, publications, initiating and supporting events, conferences and study seminars in addition to providing current and up-to-date information about developments in the oil sector of the region. Our goal at ICCS, is to bring people and ideas together for the economic development in the area that will benefit all the Region, contribute to mutual understanding and regional and international cooperation.

The ICRC has been working in Azerbaijan, in relation to the Nagorny Karabakh conflict, since 1992. It focuses on encouraging the authorities to provide answers to the families of missing persons. It monitors the problems of detainees held in connection with the conflict, detained for security reasons or otherwise vulnerable, while supporting the authorities in bringing the spread of tuberculosis (TB) in prisons under control. It assists the authorities in ensuring appropriate physical rehabilitation services across country. The ICRC promotes the national implementation of international humanitarian law (IHL) and its integration into the training of the armed and security forces and into university and school curricula. The organization contributes to strengthening the Azerbaijan Red Crescent Society particularly in tracing, promotion of humanitarian principles and basics of IHL, and in mine action. In Nagorny Karabakh, the ICRC also supports primary-health-care services.

"IDEAL" Initiative Centre was found in February 2002, we mainly work in regions, in remote districts of Azerbaijan where the youth getting less information about everything. We worked with IFES (International Fund of Electing Systems), OSIAF (Open Society Institute Assistance Foundation) and Democracy Commission, US Embassy, Azerbaijan. In 2002 with financial assistance of IFES we successfully provided seminars at 4 schools (more 120 pupils) of Ismayill district concerning municipal. In 2003-2004 with financial assistance of OSIAF and with helping AYLU (Azerbaijan Young Lawyers Union) we provide training – seminars in 55 municipality of Ismayilli district concerning financial – economic fundamentals of municipality and decentralization. In 2004-2005 with financial assistance of Embassy of United States of America (Democracy Commission Small Grants Program), we implemented the project "Ismayilli Village School Municipalities". We created 18 School municipalities in 18 remote villages of Ismayili district. On 15, 16, 17 April 2004 our organization together with Ismayilli Main Municipality and with Regional Resource Centre of IFES arranged a "Global Youth Day" and "A day of Earth". Besides our and municipality members there were many-many young people, who participated in greening, cleaning and another works.

of the Red Cross in many Islamic countries. The Federation's mission is to improve the lives of vulnerable people by mobilizing the power of humanity. Vulnerable people are those who are at greatest risk from situations that threaten their survival, or their capacity to live with an acceptable level of social and economic security and human dignity. Often, these are victims of natural disasters, poverty brought about by socio-economic crises, refugees, and victims of health emergencies.

IRC is a global nonsectarian, voluntary organization providing relief, protection and resettlement services to people fleeing racial, religious and ethnic persecution, as well as those uprooted by war and violence. In February 1994, IRC began implementing emergency water, sanitation, shelter and health operations in areas of IDP and refugee settlement. Since 1998, IRC has focused on longer-term projects aimed at increasing the development capacity of communities, municipalities and local NGOs. IRC's goal is to help communities identify and address their own priorities and find

Kennedy in 1961. Its mission is to promote international peace and friendship through the service abroad of American Volunteers. More than 160,000 Americans from every background have served in the Peace Corps in 134 countries. Through their service, Volunteers have fostered people-to- people relationships that help establish a foundation for peace. Volunteers today continue the tradition of working in partnership with people worldwide to improve basic conditions and create new opportunities. They live in the communities in which they work and they learn to speak the local languages. Volunteers share and represent the culture and values of American people of various races, ethnic and religious backgrounds. Upon their return to the United States they help expand Americans' understanding of the world by bringing their personal understanding of the cultures, customs, languages, and traditions of other people. The three goals of the Peace Corps are: 1. To help people of interested countries meet their needs for trained men and women. 2. To help promote a better understanding of the American people on the part of the people served; 3. To help promote a better understanding of other peoples on the part of the American people.

REC Caucasus assists the Caucasus states in solving environmental problems and supports in building the civil society through promotion of public participation in the decision-making process, development of free exchange of information and encouragement of cooperation at national and regional level among NGOs, governments, businesses, local communities and all other stakeholders. The founding document of REC Caucasus - its Charter - was signed in September, 1999 by the governments of Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia and the European Union. Work of the organisation has been supported by the core funding provided by the EU. Following an agreement signed between REC Caucasus and the USA, the US became a key supporter and donor of REC Caucasus. Other financial and technical assistance has been provided by Denmark, Germany, Switzerland.

work with and for children. This means finding the answers to the fundamental questions: • Who and where are the children and families most directly affected by a given issue? • What are their views on their situation? What do they see as the solution? • Who is responsible for action on this issue? • Do they have the necessary capacity and resources to take action? The aim is to identify those who can make the most difference in the challenges that face children, and help them to fulfill their obligations. KEY CHALLENGES FOR CHILDREN IN AZERBAIJAN: • Deteriorating health: Infant and maternal mortality rates are the highest in Europe. With over 100 children dying before the age of five for every 1,000 live births, Azerbaijan has an Under-five Mortality Rate (U5MR) ranking of 46 in the world, putting it on a par with countries that have much lower GNI per capita. One of the main problems in the health system, particularly for vulnerable groups, is access to good quality pharmaceuticals at reasonable prices. Poor nutrition is a major underlying cause of child mortality, with 10% of babies born underweight, 13% of children under five stunted, and 75% suffering from Vitamin A deficiency. • Education: Only 11% of children pre-school, with large discrepancies between rural and urban areas. The quality of education has deteriorated since the early 1990s and many teachers have left the education system because of the falling value of their salaries and the deteriorating school environment. While enrolment rates are monitored regularly, there is no routine data on attendance rates disaggregated by gender. • Poverty: The official unemployment rate was 1.4% in October 2003, but unofficial sources suggest that more than 10% of economically active citizens are unemployed. Almost half of the population lives in poverty, i.e. below less than a dollar a day. Analyses by age-groups based on the results of household budget survey 2003 indicate that children are again the most vulnerable, with under 15 year age group having the highest poverty level 50%. • Child Protection: Around 10% of children do not live in a family environment, with significant numbers living in institutions. Precise numbers are unknown, as no comprehensive survey has been carried out. Many still believe that children receive better care in an institution. This belief, combined with low household incomes and poor regulatory mechanisms, has resulted in increased child institutionalization. As many as 15% of births go unregistered as a result of bureaucratic procedures and informal payments for registration. The emergence of "Street children" is a relatively new phenomenon and stems from the sharp drop in the economic and social status of families. Available figures are flexible and seasonable. The latest information from the Ministry of Internal Affairs says that over 500 children were registered at police stations in 2003 for petty crimes, of whom 80% were not attending school. Approximately 24 of Azerbaijan's 65 regions are thought to be contaminated with landmines and unexploded ordnance (UXO). Of those killed by landmines or UXO to date, 13% have been children. • Refugees and displacement: The longstanding conflict with Armenia remains unresolved and the upheavals of 1988-1993 continue to cause suffering. There are nearly 1 million internally displaced persons (IDPs) and refugees from Armenia and other countries, over half of them women and children. Refugees and displaced people have poverty levels 20% higher than the national average. • HIV/AIDS: As of 2006, there were around 1000 registered cases of HIV/AIDS. In 50% of these, injection drug use was the main mode of transmission, with the sharing of needles the major immediate cause. Knowledge about HIV/AIDS and its prevention is low. Only one third of 10-18-year olds about HIV/AIDS and slightly more than two thirds of those aged 19-24 years believe that it can be prevented.

HIV/AIDS is not addressed with the seriousness warranted, and traditions prevent open discussion. OUR RESPONSE: Action on child health and nutrition: We continue to support national health reform and the decentralization of services. Recognising the huge discrepancies between official and survey data on infant, child and maternal mortality, we support improvements to the health information system. In response to the alarming level of child malnutrition, we work with the government, NGOs and youth volunteers to combat iodine deficiency disorders, anemia and Vitamin A deficiency. Within the space of three years, the percentage of households consuming iodized salt has increased from virtually zero to 70%. As a fervent supporter of breastfeeding, UNICEF continues to support the Baby-Friendly Hospital Initiative. Also, we have partnered with major donors, including the World Bank and USAID to create a national Primary Health Care policy based on the lessons learned from health and nutrition projects and the results of an assessment of the outcomes of primary health care reform. As a result UNICEF advocacy, the government has taken full responsibility for the provision of vaccines. (with the exception of Hepatitis B) since 2003. Action on education: Based on our experience on the integration of early child care and the development of households and formal pre-school, we are working with the government and NGOs on comprehensive policy formulation in this area. We continue to be involved in the education reform process. While continuing our support of the education reform process to increase the quality of education through enhancing early childhood development, encouraging active learning methodologies and encapsulating children's rights issues into school curriculum, UNICEF aims to empower parents and families. Our success with parent-teacher associations gives us the confidence to take this project to scale. We are also supporting the introduction of interactive learning to ensure that children learn effectively so that they are motivated and achieve results at school. Action on Child Protection: UNICEF advocates for legislative reform and supports alternatives to institutionalized child-care. Our major concerns are children without parental guidance, children whose development is undermined by family breakdown, children with disabilities, children with behavioral disorders, abused and neglected children, children on the street, children who are victims of exploitation and children in institutions. Social sector professionals are being trained to identify children with special needs and apply a community and family-based response to their development. We also work to boost the capacities of health, social welfare and educational institutions, particularly on psychological rehabilitation. UNICEF is gravely concerned about children living in mine/UXO contaminated areas, and cooperates with national partners to provide Mine Risk Education in schools in the frontline areas. We support the development of national databases on child rights and promote the use of rights-based data for policy development and monitoring. We put a special emphasis on advocacy for the protection of social services for children and women, using the CRC, CEDAW and Education for all as tools to promote and influence policy reform on child protection. Action on Young People's health, development and participation: We support efforts to inform young people about the dangers of high-risk behaviors, including HIV/AIDS, with a special focus most at risk, such as IDPs and refugees and other impoverished and marginalized groups. Our main strategy is the empowerment and participation of young people and our collaboration with young people's organizations aims to promote active participation. Our involvement in the HIV/AIDS country theme group has contributed to the government's efforts to develop a national plan of action for HIV/AIDS. We are committed to increasing media activities by, with and for children. Also we support projects that allow young people to highlight the problems they face, to propose solutions and prepare them for a society where freedom of speech and thought prevails.
